1. At a special meeting called by CARAVEL to discuss another matter reported in EGPA-23067, CARAVEL remarked in passing that he had recently been queried by officials of the Ministry of Interior in Bonn concerning his opinion of the competence and character of Reinhard *DULLIEN President of the Bundeskriminalamt. 2. CARAVEL stated that he concluded from the nature of the questions asked him that DULLIEN's stock in the Ministry is sinking, and announced the possibility that within the next year or so DULLIEN will be replaced. In response to a rather direct question, CARAVEL added that the chances of DULLIEN's successor being a professional police officer are practically nil, and that very likely the position of President of the Bundeskriminalamt will always be filled by a man with a degree in law who has no practical experience of police work. In other words, CARAVEL's chances are dim. 3. CARAVEL stated that he had given his assessment of DULLIEN forthrightly but without unnecessary editorializing, sticking entirely to facts. He considers DULLIEN incompetent in police work, weak as an administrator, lazy (he is particularly bitter that this entire summer DULLIEN has been on one kind or another of leave and CARAVEL has had to do all the administrative and executive work of the organization in addition to his regular heavy duties, with no prospect of leave for himself), and ineffective in his representational functions. 4. Case Officer comments: So far as I know, CARAVEL is our only source on the character and competence of DULLIEN, and this latest report is consistent with earlier information. I recall recent conversation with [redacted] however, in which the question of CARAVEL's possible potential for advancement in the government was discussed; [redacted] quoted [redacted] as saying (if I remember correctly) that CARAVEL himself was the object of some criticism in the Ministry, as being not sufficiently salonfähig to manage the representational functions of a top agency job and as being too direct of manner to deal adequately with the politicians and professional administrators. [redacted] with a law doctorate, also pointed out that CARAVEL is not a Jurist. It may be, therefore, that CARAVEL's remarks to me about DULLIEN are motivated to some degree by a consciousness of his own inadequacies and that some of the ministerial questioning was directed against himself. On the other hand I find it inconceivable that CARAVEL will not always have a special, senior and indispensable role in the German police system, if merely because the reports and directives of the Ministry of Interior on almost all criminal police matters and many security matters are written by him, though signed by various officials (Volljuristen every one) of the Ministry. Copy filed in 32W-2-13/4 APPROVED: [Signature] Distribution: 3-EE 1-32W-2-13/4 1C 2-BORN 2-COB
